Rock-solid education

Dr. T.A. Loeffler, a well-known professor in Memorial's School of Human Kinetics and Recreation, recently took a group of students to Flatrock, just northeast of St. John's, to do some rock climbing. The eight students are enrolled in the course Human Kinetics and Recreation 2545: Introduction to Outdoor Education and Recreation. Students are introduced to many aspects of outdoor education including hiking, backpacking, rock climbing, canoeing, camping and kayaking. Dr. Loeffler was assisted at Flatrock by Liz Ohle from the Faculty of Medicine and Natelle Tulk a graduate student in the School of Human Kinetics and Recreation.
